SHELDON PLAN BEST--- NIXON.

ADMITS THAT IT MIGHT HAVE SAVED THE SHIPYARD CO.

Testines That, Even With the $100,000 From the Bethlehem Plant, the Interest on the Bonds Could Not Have Been Paid-His Plea for Publicity

Lewis Nixon admitted on cross-examination yesterday his belief that the plan of the Sheldon committee for the reorganization of the United States Shipbuilding Company would have saved the company from bankruptcy last spring. The complaining bondholders who are seeking to make the temporary receivership permanent assert that the plan was part of a scheme to wreck the company in the interests of Charles M. Schwab and others.

Mr. Nixon admitted also that, even had the earnings of the Bethlehem plant been turned in, they would have been wiped out by the company's obligations by Aug. 1 and that the company would then have been on the verge of bankruptcy, with its bonds of no value. Rather than let the public deal in its securities any longer Mr. Nixon even wrote to Mr. Schwab advising that its real condition be published, is was the plan of the committee. Mr. Nixon, who had been called by the complaining bondholders, was cross-ex-amined by William D. Guthrie, counsel for the company. Mr. Schwab was present at the hearing, with Max Pam. Mr. Nixon began his testimony by identifying the underwriting agreements signed by Mr. Sohwab and some of the complainants in the suit as being the same. It was shown that Henry T. Scott of the Union Iron Works, had subscribed for $250,000 and E. W. Hyde of the Bath Iron Works for Going back to the appraisals made by Admiral Bowles and Mr. Nixon at the time the prior scheme was talked about, when a valuation of $45,000,000 was put upon the plants, Mr. Guthrie brought out that this included the Newport News Company, which did not go into the combination, but did not include the two other concerns that afterward went in. Mr. Nixon said that the Canda company was deemed desirable as a central plant for equipments at first, but that later on he opposed its purchase. He ceased his opposition, he said, because much of the underwriting was based on it and to have objected longer would have invalidated this.

Mr. Guthrie asked the witness if he knew to what the allotment of $20,000 cash, $50,000 bonds and $150,000 of each kind of stock from the promoter's profits to Alexander Green related? Mr. Nixon said that hn W. Young, the promoter, had told mit was for counsel fees.

"I had nothing to do with it, but Young

"I had nothing to do with it, but Young told me he was anxious to compensate them for helping him ever since the scheme was first talked of," Nixon said.

The witness said that when he signed with Dresser the notes for $4,000,000 he believed that he had ample security in the form of Shipbuilding securities. Mr. Dresser, he said, told him that the Trust Company of the Republic would relieve him of the responsibility afterward.

Mr. Nixon, when asked what he knew about the Bethlehem company before its acquisition, said that he had inspected it several times, and added:

"It was one of the great establishments of its kind in the world. It was of value to the company because we wanted to be able to bid for completed battleships. That is something no other country in the world can do. Building, arming and armoring a battleship would give us a standing throughout the world that no other country ing a battleship would give us a standing throughout the world that no other country has. We wanted to show to the world we could do that."

"I also knew," he added, "that the earnings of the Bethlehem plant were large, and as there would have to be practically a reorganization of some of the other companies. I bound that these earnings would panies, I hoped that these earnings would help in the combination."

Q. Isn't it a fact that in the year after its cquisition the earnings increased $1,000,000 ver the year before. A. In the neighbor-over the year before. A. In the leadson-hood of that.

Q. Isn't it a fact that the earnings of the Bethlehem plant at the close of the first year were $2,500,000 per annum net profit? A. I'm inclined to think so.

Q. In your opinion as an expert, will there be an increase of these net earnings? A. In the present condition of naval construction I should say there would.

I should say there would.

Mr. Guthrie asked Mr. Nixon to tell what the condition of the industry in the United States at the time the company was formed was, as compared with previous years. Mr. Nixon replied that with the exception of the Lake regions, where it was flourishing, the shipbuilding industry of the country was "languishing."

"This," said he, "is due to two things: First, because the Government had appropriated an enormous amount for naval

First, because the Government had ap-propriated an enormous amount for naval construction, practically doubling the number of ships. We have not got here the amount of labor they have abroad and hence the cost of labor was raised. Pros-perity also raised the cost of materials. Then the labor organizations began an agitation for shorter hours, which we were forced to concede. This has decreased the output and made the general expenses greater. The increase to-day in the cost of ships for these reasons is enormous.

To show that the witness's Crescent and a bad not been purchased at an exworks had not been purchased at an ex-cessive price, Mr. Guthrie brought out that Mr. Nixon had refused a cash offer of $1,000,000 for them at the time the ship-building project was first broached. Mr. Guthrie then had Mr. Nixon identify

Mr. Guthrie then had Mr. Nixon identify three letters he wrote to Mr. Schwab in May last. In one of these he said that the credit of the company had been impaired by the talk on the street and asked Mr. Schwab if something could not be done to protect the company. In another letter Nixon asked Schwab to confer with Mr. Sheldon and "do something at the earliest possible moment." Mr. Guthrie asked him what it meant.

"The first of July, when the interest was due, was looming up," said Mr. Nixon.

"The first of July, when the interest was due, was looming up," said Mr. Nixon. who also admitted that he had talked early in the spring with Mr. Schwab about getting more capital as being absolutely necessary.

"Mr. Nixon, isn't it a fact," said Mr. Guhrie, "that, as a business man, reflection convinced you that it would be wise to recommend this [the Sheldon] plan?"

"I saw no other way," replied Mr. Nixon.

O. Isn't it a fact that if the $2,000,000 provided under this plan had been furnished you would have been able to rehabilitate the company? A. I think so.

Q. Weren't you convinced that it would be to the best interests of those who held the securities and place the plants on the proper basis? A. Yes.

Q. And if a receiver had not been appointed all plants would now be in successful operation? A. On condition that the money was obtained I am satisfied that the plants would have been kept running.

Q. Do you think as a business man that over the company along with fixed charges of the sample of Mr. Guthrie showed that after paying the interest on Mr. Schwab's bonds on July 1, the balance of the $900,000 of divi-July 1, the balance of the $900,000 of dividends from the Bethlehem company would have been completely eaten up by the interest on the other bonds due Aug. 1. Mr. Nixon explained that he thought he might have gotten out of this hole by utilizing the bonds in the treasury, as the attack on the credit of the company would have ceased with the payment of the interest. "Would you have paid the interest, not-withstanding that the next day you might be precipitated into bankruptcy?" asked Mr. Guthrie, and Mr. Nixon said that he didn't think that he would.

"Was it not a fact then," said Mr. Guthrie, "that the board of directors thought from the lack of accord and the need of money that the proper course was to publish the people should not deal any longer in the securities upon the assumption that the interest would be paid in July?"

Mr. Guthrie said that that was all and the hearing was then adjourned until a week

Before His Departure the Prophet Said Assassins Were After Him-Mrs. Dowie Says Good-by at the Night Meeting

-The Crowd Hears and Respects Her. Dowie and his family left town last night on the midnight train for Boston. Mrs. Dowie and her son Glad the Unkissed are going to sail from Boston for Europe this morning.

The Restorer went to see them off on the ship. He will return to-morrow and resume the job of restoring New York. Some bold friend in the Zion Guard reminded Elijah yesterday that there is a passage in the Proverbs to the effect that he that ruleth his spirit is better than he that taketh a city. Dowie took the hint, and the crowds that went to Madison Square Garden yesterday and last night to see a stout old man in whiskers lose his temper were disappointed. Last night, for the first time since the Restoration Host struck town, the Garden Restoration Host struck town, the Garden was not filled. At no time during the evening were there less than 3,000 vacant seats, and after the processional, which is well worth seeing, was over and Dowie began to talk, there were 4,000 empty chairs. In the morning Dowie damned medicine and laughed at all physical ills as imaginary. In the evening his voice was cracked from a cold and he omitted his sermon.

At the morning service the Prophet announced that his life had been threatened by assassins. He did the same thing in Chicago several months ago.

"My mail is filled," he said, "with anonymous letters threatening to kill me. They are dreadful, and I no longer let my wife read my mail."

Then with a comprehensive wave of his arm which no one in the audience could take to himself, the Restorer proceeded: "There sits a man with a loaded revolver.

Last night a man rushed to my carriage ntending to throw a bomb into it, but he saw my face and venerable beard and stayed his hand."

Nobody in the audience seemed thrilled

Nobody in the audience seemed thrilled by these mysterious references, so Dowie switched off onto his morning sermon and told what a Christian should do when sick. Many of the women in the Restoration Host have got colds and are tired out from working eighteen hours a day advertising the boss in their house to house canvass and listening to his tirades in the Garden.

The constant coughing of the women and

The constant coughing of the women and their general dragged out appearance did not chime in well with the sermon on healing, so Dowie cut it short.

He wound up the day service with the assertion that a lot of wealthy New Yorkers were begging him to establish a Zion City within twenty-five miles of the Tenderloin. At a late hour last night the police had got no clew as to the identity of the assassin who wanted to throw dynamite into the who wanted to throw dynamite into the Three hundred and forty of the Zionists who came with Dowie a week ago started for Chicago on a special train yesterday. This was not a desertion, but was in accordance with a prearranged plan. As many more of Dowie's followers will arrive here from Zion City on Sunday to take the places of those who have gone home.

The Zionists explained that somebody had to be at home to run the city. Nevertheless, it was a thankful lot of men and remove who wished the cord of the cord o women who started for home after one hard week of trying to make New York take their Prophet seriously.

Dowie's voice had become so feeble by last night that those in the front seats could last night that those in the front seats could only catch a word now and then.

Two or three persons rolled up their programmes and used them for ear trumpets. Then the example was followed all over the garden and the Prophet was confronted by 4,000 evidences that his voice needed a long, long rest.

"What's the matter with Bill Devery?" somebody yelled from the gallery, but he didn't succeed in making a very serious of prolonged disturbance.

A general exodus was checked by Mrs Dowie, who interrupted her husband and began talking to the audience herself. Almost everybody could hear her and remained to listen.

his speech was drowned in spots by shouts and hand clapping.

When the Restorer got another chance he repeated his daily statement that all New York newspapers are liars and made a bid for further interest in his meetings by announcing that on some evening he was going to devote a whole hour to handling the press with "a cord of lashes."

In Dowie's absence, Deacon Barnes of the Zion law department will preside at to-night's meeting and tell all about the ndustries of Zion City.

CIVIL SERVICE RULES IGNORED

THE ALLEGED VIOLATIONS IN PHILADELPHIA SETTLED.

Complaints Were Taken to the President, and the Mint Officials Promised to Reinstate the Discharged Employees and to Be Good in the Future.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—The differences of epinion between the Civil Service Commisdon and the superintendent of the Philadelphia Mint were carried to President Roosevelt to-day. Commissioner Cooley, who said recently that the Federal offices in Philadelphia were "the worst managed of who said recently that the rederal offices in Philadelphia were "the worst managed of any in the country," went to the White House accompanied by Mint Superintendent John H. Landis.

Mr. Cooley declares that at least forty clerks and employees of the mint have been removed irregularly, many of the removals being for the purpose of providing places for persons recommended by Pennsylvania politicians. Supt. Landis maintains that removals were made for cause and after due approval by the Secretary of the Treasury.

After the conference at the White House, Supt. Landis, accompanied by Director of the Mint Roberts, went to the Civil Service Commission and had a long conference with Commissioners Cooley and Procter. The matter of the appointment of laborers and their promotion to classified positions, which was what the commission and the President objected to, was settled, and Supt. Landis promised the commission that the removals and reinstatements desired would be made.

Mr. Landis explained to the President that the removals were made consequent to the appointment of the Mint force, but that the removals were made consequent upon a reduction of the Mint force, but Mr. Cooley's investigation showed that there had been no reduction. In speaking of the conferences to-day Mr. Cooley *The whole matter has been settled, and Mr. Landis will make such reinstatements and removals as the commission desires. The commission is perfectly satisfied with the outcome of the Philadelphia case, and as Mr. Landis says that further appointments will be made from the eligible lists of the commission, I do not think there will be a repetition of the irregularities.

The Hon. James Wood, president of the anti-cinal State committee, says of the proposition to vote $101,000,000 on Tuesday, Nov. 8, to the Erie Canal: We oppose this scheme because of its rank injustice. The farms of the West compete with the farms of New York in the markets of New York city. The farmers of New York object to paying immense sums to give their competitors an unnatural and unfair advantage. On the same ground, it is unfair to tax our rallroads to build a competing line to undermine their legitimate business, which they are already doing at the lowest cost. We stand for fair play all around.
